

Factsheet on Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children

Millions of children in alternative care

Millions of children around the world live in informal or formal foster care, in institutions, or are otherwise separated from their parents; many more are at risk of separation, due to difficulties within the family, the impact of HIV, armed conflict, natural disasters and poverty. The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC) recognises the child's right to be cared for by his or her parents, and sets out States Parties' obligations to provide suitable alternative care. However, current international instruments offer only partial and limited guidance on steps to prevent family separation and to ensure adequate care.

What are the risks faced by children now?

❖ Children who are informally cared by relatives or unrelated families are usually well loved and cared for, but their risk of discrimination, inadequate care, abuse and exploitation is greater than those who live with their parents. This situation is exacerbated by factors such as HIV/AIDS, armed conflict, and economic migration. Across Asia, Africa and Latin America, 13.4 million children have lost at least one parent to AIDS.

❖ Children are often placed within the formal care system (as ordered by a competent authority) unnecessarily and for longer periods than needed. For example, 1.5 million children are in out-of-home care in Central and Eastern Europe of which 900,000 are in large residential facilities. The risk of abuse and neglect in poorly resourced and monitored foster and residential care is well documented as in the UN Study on Violence against Children at <http://www.violencestudy.org/r242>.

❖ Without appropriate prevention and reintegration mechanisms, children without any form of care are amongst those most at risk for abuse and exploitation. These children may be forced to live on the street and work in harmful conditions. Every year, 1.2 million children are trafficked and another 2 million children are forced to work in the commercial sex industry.

Few children in any of the above situations have the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care arrangements. Their voices must be heard.

Why are existing instruments insufficient?

The UNCRC establishes a useful framework, but does not provide guidance or set minimum standards. The Guidelines set out desirable orientations for policy and practice to deal with issues such as prevention, the conditions for children to be removed from parental care, the provision of a range of care options to meet individual children's needs, the criteria for determining out-of-home care options as well as the selection, training, monitoring and support for alternative carers. Why address these concerns through Guidelines?

Experience has shown that such guidance can be extremely useful to States seeking to implement the UNCRC. UN Rules, developed in the area of juvenile justice, for example, have proved to be extremely useful in defining standards and guiding implementation. The Guidelines on alternative care are already demonstrating their value for professionals, judicial authorities and other administrators working in child protection in Eastern European and Latin American countries as they guide their activities.

Guidelines approved at the level of the General Assembly would help protect children and families facing extreme problems better than the inadequate piece-meal coverage of current texts. Children in different countries share common problems of stigma, isolation, lower rates of education attainment and higher rates of homelessness after leaving care. These Guidelines on alternative care can give each of these children a better opportunity to reach their full potential and transition successfully into adulthood.

BACKGROUND: GUIDELINES ON ALTERNATIVE CARE

On June 17, 2009 the Human Rights Council (HRC) in Geneva adopted by consensus a procedural resolution A/HRC/11/L.11 submitting the "Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children" to the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) in New York for consideration with a view to their adoption on the 20th anniversary of the UNCRC in November.

These Guidelines were first called for by UNICEF and International Social Service (ISS) in 2004 which resulted in the Day of General Discussion in 2005 on children without parental care. One recommendation by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child from this Day was the development of guidelines to improve the implementation of the UNCRC for children deprived of their family. In 2006 Brazil worked with UNICEF and NGOs to host an intergovernmental meeting to develop a draft text.

That draft evolved in 2007-2008, notably, at a consultation meeting in Cairo hosted by the League of Arab States and was taken forward by Brasil, as co-ordinator of the Group of Friends, into the HRC. Over this period awareness was raised through various UNGA and HRC resolutions, a high level panel at the HRC in June 2008, and a long series of intergovernmental consultations to negotiate the text in early 2009.

Lobbying for the adoption of the Guidelines at the UNGA

Whilst the latest resolution at the Human Rights Council is a major step forward, more work and lobbying needs to be undertaken in New York as well as in individual countries to promote its final adoption at the UN General Assembly. A few lobbying activities are listed below:

A three-tiered approach to advocacy could include:

Level 1: International NGOs and coalitions organise sending letters signed by young people, children and others involved in the care system and start a discussion with their governments.

Level 2: Partner with local NGOs and NGO networks to send copies of the letter, the Guidelines and supporting materials to the sub-commission and technical groups inside the Children and Family National Ministry.

Level 3: Encourage the creation of technical round tables bringing together NGOs, key stakeholders, experts and specialists in the sector, and youth participation.

Model letter

The following is a model letter that could be sent to the relevant Ministry as well as to Missions in New York. The address of the STATE's Mission in NY, see <http://www.un.org/en/members/index.shtml>. To access statistics about a particular country, please see the UNICEF webpage at <http://www.childinfo.org/statsbycountry.html>

20th anniversary celebrations

Given that many organisations are in the process of planning for the 20th anniversary of the UNCRC, there may be opportunities to include an awareness raising activity about the Guidelines as part of the celebrations. For example, the Child Rights Alliance England has developed the UNCRC Anniversary Packs which are being sent electronically to schools and other interested persons (<http://www.crae.org.uk/news-and-events/news/uncrc-anniversary-packs-for-schools.html>) which could be adapted to include information about the alternative care situation. RELAF in Argentina is also working closely with other NGOs on celebrations in August 2009, where attention will be given to the Guidelines (<http://www.relaf.org/>).

Further information

If you would like further information about lobbying initiatives in New York or in your region, please feel free to contact the co-convenors of the NGO Working Group on alternative care spearheading the initiative, Alan Kikuchi-White, Geneva Representative, SOS-Kinderdorf International at KikuchiA@sos-kd.org or Mia Dambach, Children's Rights Specialist, International Social Service at irc-cir@iss-ssi.org. It would also be great if you could let the co-convenors know of any initiatives that you have or will undertake to promote the adoption of the Guidelines as a means of sharing this information with other advocates.

Model Letter

DATE (LETTER MUST SENT BEFORE OCTOBER 2009)

Dear INSERT NAME,

On June 17, 2009 the Human Rights Council adopted by consensus a procedural resolution A/HRC/11/L.13 submitting the "Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children" to the UN General Assembly (UNGA) in New York for consideration with a view to their adoption on the 20th anniversary of the UN Convention on Rights of the Child in November 09. Over 40 countries co-sponsored this resolution showing their clear endorsement for the Guidelines, support which is strongly shared by the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child, UNICEF and civil society. Further information about the Guidelines is enclosed with this letter (ATTACH FACT SHEET).

There are millions of children in the world that would benefit from these Guidelines if they are adopted, not to mention the INSERT STATISTICS in INSERT NAME OF STATE who are in need of alternative care. While the UNCRC recognises the child's right to be cared for by his or her parents, and sets out States Parties' obligations to provide suitable alternative care, current international instruments offer only partial and limited guidance on steps to prevent separation and to ensure adequate care. The support of INSERT NAME OF STATE is critical to ensuring that children's rights are fully protected.

We would like to encourage INSERT NAME OF STATE to adopt the Guidelines for the Alternative Care of Children at the UNGA in 2009. It would also be worthwhile for you to consider what role you might play in mobilising support amongst members of the UNGA.

If you would like to discuss the Guidelines further, you can contact a representative of NAME OF YOUR ORGANISATION OR THE CO-CONVENORS OF THE NGO WORKING GROUP ON ALTERNATIVE CARE.

Sincerely,
INSERT NAME
